Because of their dominant position in the computer operating system market I the consumer can walk into any office or home and do some constructive work immediately. If the market consisted of plethora of competing OS's that would be nearly impossible. My life is better, easier and much more productive with the essential standardization that has happened largely due to market conditions. I have owned computers with different operating systems and while theirs is far from perfect, the fact that it is the same whether at work or in a cyber cafe in UlanBator, Mongolia has improved my computing life not harmed it.
